ARMSTRONG AND LARSON REV UP THEIR CO-MODERATOR CAMPAIGNS WITH RACE CARS AND HUGS

Smiles and laughter comingled with warm hugs as the Rev. Cecelia “CeCe” Armstrong and the Rev. Anthony “Tony” Larson welcomed visitors to their booth Saturday evening, on the eve of the election that could lead to the South Carolina pastors becoming co-moderators of the 226th General Assembly.

The duo, which is one of two pairs vying to become co-moderators, greeted guests during a reception sponsored by the Committee on Local Arrangements of the Presbytery of Utah, in partnership with several entities affiliated with the national church. Read more.

McCLURE TAYLOR AND MORALES DISCUSS STORIES OF COURAGE AND COMFORT DURING

On Saturday evening, the Rev. Dr. Marian McClure Taylor and the Rev. Daniel Morales greeted a steady stream of commissioners during a reception with the co-moderator and stated clerk candidates in the ballroom of the Marriot hotel. With wide smiles and friendly handshakes, McClure Taylor and Morales spent time getting to know the concerns of their fellow commissioners and sharing their own faith and commitments. These experiences comprise what McClure Taylor and Morales call their “Theology of Hope,” the theme for their campaign represented by the image of rivers in the desert, drawing on Isaiah 43:18-19.

YOUNG ADULT ADVISORY DELEGATES PARTICIPATE IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY ORIENTATION

The Young Adult Advisory Delegates orientation began Saturday morning led by the Rev. Katrina Pekich-Bundy and Ekama Eni.

Eni led the group in an opening meditation from Cole Arthur Riley's book "Black Liturgies." Eni selected a passage called "Place" as a hope to build some commonality. "Since we're all coming from different places and being asked to do a 'thing' together in a new place for most of us, it was important that we felt a connection of being together in this shared space," Eni said.

Throughout the assembly, advisory delegates help guide GA commissioners in a variety of ways.
